The National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) represents approximately 7,000 governmental, private, academic, and uniformed services sector environmental public health professionals in the U.S., its territories, and internationally. NEHA is the profession's strongest advocate for excellence in the practice of environmental public health as it delivers on its mission to build, sustain, and empower an effective environmental public health workforce.

NEHA supports the following policies and actions:

- Investment of greater resources into research on onsite wastewater treatment systems design, construction, operation, and maintenance regulations, with ont (s)1 em(a)4 6(t)1 .1 Tc 0 Tw 8 in to
- Provide training and workforce development professionals regarding best practices for co wastewater treatment systems.
- Research investments on the health, social, onsite wastewater treatment system use at
- Increase the capacity for communities to sup onsite sewage maintenance requirements th handling capabilities.
- Provide increased funding dedicated to prog and maintaining onsite wastewater treatmer
- Invest in developing and implementing cons to educate current and future homeowners a use and

Withers, P.J.A., Jordan, P., May, L., Jarvie, H.P., & Deal, N.E. (2014). Do septic tank systems pose a hidden threat to water quality? , (2), 123–130. https://doi.org/10.1890/130131

Withers, P.J.A., May, L., Jarvie, H.P., Jordan, P., Doody, D., Foy, R.H., Bechmann, M., Cooksley, S., Dils, R., & Deal, N. (2012). Nutrient emissions to water from septic tank systems in rural catchments: Uncertainties and implications for policy. , , 71–82. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.envsci.2012.07.023

Ye, M., Sun, H., & Hallas, K. (2017). Numerical estimation of nitrogen load from septic systems to surface water bodies in St. Lucie River and Estuary Basin, Florida. , , Article 32. https://doi.org/10.1007/s12665-016-6358-y

Gina Bare, RN
Associate Director, Program and Partnership Development, NEHA

Jesse C. Bliss, MPH, PhD
Director, Program and Partnership Development, NEHA

Nicole L. Dutra, MPH
Senior Project Coordinator, Program and Partnership Development, NEHA

Christopher Walker, MSEH, REHS
Senior Program Analyst, Environmental Health, Program and Partnership Development, NEHA

Tim Callahan, MPH
Evaluation & Support Program Director, Environmental Health Section, Georgia Department of Public Health

Ann Loree, REHS/RS
Regional Public Health Inspector, Great Meadows Public Health Collaborative

Chris Manley, REHS
Environmental Health Director, Larimer County Department of Health and Environment

Thomas Vyles, REHS

Environmental Health Manager, Town of Flower Mound

: